Ohio works to snag aerospace companies

The first celebration of Ohio's rich aerospace history and thriving aerospace industry took place on May 7 at the Ohio Statehouse in Columbus. The Greater Cleveland Partnership (GCP) helped design the day to bring to light Ohio's extraordinary and diverse development of aerospace advancement.

"We have the unique opportunity to increase our high-technology workforce by leveraging the aerospace assets in Ohio," says Joe Roman, president and chief executive of the GCP. "By building on our successes at NASA Glenn, we can strengthen Northeast Ohio's growing aerospace industry."

By leveraging federal installations and their economic impact on Ohio, the growth of the state's aerospace industry could sustain a prime aerospace manufacturer. This could help the state's universities and nonprofits to attract more students and high-level workers. ●
