Make connections through a Greater Cleveland Partnership Investor-level membership.

As a member of the Greater Cleveland Partnership (GCP) and its small business partner COSE, you're part of one of the largest and most prestigious business organizations in our region, state and country. We're here to connect you with the opportunities that will help grow your company and improve your bottom line.

If you've already experienced tremendous growth, you may want to consider upgrading your membership and becoming a GCP Investor. At this level, you'll gain access to a broader range of benefits and discounts as well as opportunities to connect with leaders of the region's mid-size and large companies.

Paul Federico, the GCP's vice president for Investor Development, and his team are on hand to walk you through the process and explain why this change could be right for you. "An Investor-level membership is perfect for entrepreneurs whose businesses have experienced a growth spurt," he says. "We offer benefits and discounts that ensure our 'mid-market' members will get the most out of their GCP membership."

A new member's perspective

IKON Office Solutions' Major Accounts Manager Jayne M. Herak says that GCP Investor-level membership has helped her team connect with opportunities for community engagement and leadership. "Our company encourages community involvement and supports many local organizations and programs," Herak says, "so this is important to us."

She also points to the GCP's advocacy agenda as a reason to be a part of the organization. With its network of partners and the power of its members, the GCP speaks with one voice when it comes to what is best for business, the economy and job creation in the region.

"Our Investor-level membership has been a worthwhile investment," Herak says. "We have not yet used all of the perks of this membership, but we will continue to explore additional benefits, including the Chairman's Forum, the Commission on Economic Inclusion and various advocacy opportunities and advisory groups."

Why Investor-Level Membership?
